No. 124 Tremont Street.

Boston, 3rd July 1866.

Dear Sir,
I am sending you a copy of the 84th number of our parent magazine, and enclose with your authority to the superintendent and publisher of your work on the "History of the Anti-Slavery struggle in this country, in 1866" to make you the following specific suggestion, viz. If you and agree to begin the preparation of the work at the earliest day your health will admit, and to continue upon it ~~and~~ ^{and} without interruption until the work is completed, and will publish the work at our own cost and risk and pay you a copyright of ten per cent on the retail price of all copies sold. We will also enter into obligation to furnish you with such sums of money as you may find necessary in the progress of the work, not exceeding the sum of Twenty Five Hundred dollars in all - such sums to be charged to your account to offset subsequent costs for Copyright. We will also supply you of required with the assistance of a competent amanuensis at our own expense.

We may add that we should not wish the work to exceed two volumes.

We should be pleased if you would signify in writing your acceptance of this proposal.

Your ob't servant.
